

ARCHITECT and INTERIORS INDIA

19 Nov 2020

Victorian Era-inspired gastropub, Zobet, opens its doors in Kolkata

The all-day gastropub evokes a high energy vibe that resonates throughout its stylish and warm interiors

Located strategically in the heart of the city, Zobet is the newest addition to the choice of gastropubs in Kolkata. The Victorian era-inspired gastropub promises more than a delectable culinary selection along with unique handcrafted beverages and has left no stone unturned to ensure a stellar experience, right from the moment one steps in.

Designed by interior stylist Sumesh Menon from Mumbai and inspired by the Art Deco soul of Kolkata, this gastropub catches one's fancy by its generous infusion of plush, modern materials and a vibrant colour palette. The 10,000 sq-ft, 165 seater pub is one of the largest all-day gastropubs in town. The highlight of the interiors is a 35 feet-long trendy bar with a custom concrete bar front and a backdrop of four ornate windows that bring in plenty of natural light during the day time.

“The entire gastropub evokes a very high energy vibe that resonates throughout its stylish and warm interiors. When a 35 feet long, sculptural, vibrant bar blends with a cosy dining space and private lounge, it's sure to promise an alluring post-lockdown, back-to-dining experience,” shares Menon.

Nikhil Sekhani, managing director, Zobet, adds, “I heard of Sumeshh from some of my friends and after seeing his work, I knew that no one could design the eclectic space of Zobet better than him. I was thrilled to have him on board and it's been very gratifying to work with him. He made ‘betting on good times’ completely worthwhile.”